"PUNCTURE PROOF PEOPLE"

Was Subject of Lecture Delivered By Tom Hendricks At High School Last Night.

Tom Hendricks, the celebrated Pennsylvania humorist and lecturer, addressed a large audience at the High School auditorium last evening and to say that he pleased is only putting it mildly.

Hendricks is a Pennsylvania country editor whose sayings have for a number of years been quoted and appropriated by the press of his state. He accepted the call to the lyceum platform only after he had conquered in the newspaper field and made himself worthy.

He is a man with a message and his lecture on "Puncture Proof People" drove the truth home in a way that was sincere, yet pleasing withal. Some one has said that he makes "humor and pathos play tag with each other and smiles and tears sit down with each other to talk over old times."

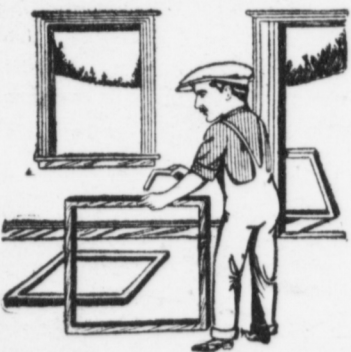

He knows how to say things, has a fine platform personality, a rich voice, real oratorical ability and a contagious enthusiasm for service. His lecture was a humorous contribution to the literature of Sane Living.

TO VOTE ON NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

Representative Carlin of Virginia, a member of the Judiciary Committee of Congress, which had voted to postpone consideration of prohibition legislation until next term of Congress, unexpectedly flopped to the drys, and it is practically certain that the present Congress will be forced to vote on nation-wide prohibition.

The woman's suffrage resolution, by a vote of 9 to 7, was postponed to the December session.

"THE SPOILERS"

Great Moving Picture Shown At Washington Theater Wednesday Night—Again Tonight.

The great movie drama, "The Spoilers," was shown at the Washington Opera House Wednesday night, and in our judgment was one of the best moving pictures we ever saw.

The play is divided into three acts with three scenes to each act, which gives you a full two hours' enjoyment. Every scene is full of action and at times the audience is held spellbound by the intense acting of the principles.

The picture is a Paramount, clear and clean, and worth the price of admission to anybody, 25 cents. Don't miss it. You'll be pleased.

EX-SHERIFFS MCKOY AND MACKAY WILL BE REIMBURSED.

The Fiscal Court decided Wednesday that ex-Sheriffs McKoy and Mackay should be paid back their fees out of the general funds of the county.

The Board of Education some time ago brought suit against these men for taking their commission out of the fund collected for the schools, and won their suit. At that time the ex-sheriffs had to make good the amount to the Board of Education. So Wednesday the court decided to recognize their liability to the ex-sheriffs, but put the matter of settlement off until the April term of court.

BIG BROTHER MOVEMENT.

This movement has been very successfully carried out in some of the cities that are larger than Maysville. It remained for Mrs. Peddicord, the very efficient superintendent of the City Mission, to conceive the idea that such a movement would be a benefit, and could be successfully carried out in Maysville.

Mrs. Peddicord has a class of sixteen boys which meets every Friday night at the mission. For this class she feels the need of the "big brother."

To get some idea of what it means we quote the Big Brother obligation:

Big Brother Obligation.

"I hereby agree to assume the responsibility of a Big Brother as indicated, namely:

"1. I will personally see the assigned boy at least twice every month.
"2. I will forward a report of his progress to the general secretary the first of each month, on blanks furnished for that purpose.

"3. In the event that I lose track of him I will notify the secretary."
Now what is the movement? It is a movement to enlist in behalf of unfortunate boys, particularly those coming before the children's court, the personal interest of men of good will.

Big Brothers are asked to express their individuality and human interest in their own way and to give what time they have at such periods as may be convenient to them.

It will be seen from the above that it means a great deal to the boy and much to the Big Brother.

Mrs. Peddicord is certainly to be commended for her interest in the boys. The Ledger wishes her success in this new movement for Maysville.

Our price this week for butterfat, 33 cents Maysville. Bring it in any day, any time of the day, and receive your check promptly.

MAYSVILLE MODEL CREAMERY.

Mr. James Cooper Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Thomas, has been very ill with inflammatory rheumatism at his home, but is now slowly improving.

Mr. John Adair is spending a few days at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Adair of West Second street.

Hunt's are selling this week, $4 and $5 handbags for $1.48 and $1.98.

SOUTH RIPLEY.

We are hardly in position to say who is to blame for existing conditions at South Ripley on the C. & O. There is a class of men who secure whiskey, beer, etc., in Ripley, who on the ferryboat and in and around the station make a disgusting exhibition of themselves. It is getting so that it is hardly safe for a woman to be at that point for fear of the profanity and obscene language she is compelled to listen to while waiting for trains.—Maysville Ledger.

The editor of The Ledger can not be worried over this matter more than the people down here, and it looks like the Sheriff of Mason county should preserve order over there. The trouble makers about all come from Maysville.—Ripley Bee.

We are in accord with Brother Newcomb. While we do not wish to avoid the responsibility of Mason county, we do believe if the officials of the C. & O., and the magistrate of the precinct in which South Ripley is located, would take this matter in hand it would not be long until the practice would cease. The proper authorities should get busy at once and stop it.

The Kind of Napkins That Sustain Our Linen Reputation

Four qualities bought months ago and consequently marked at less than their market value today, in fact, at the low price of a year ago. All are the sterling, tried and true quality, and quality never meant as much in linens as it does now. $2.98, $3.14, $3.98 and $5.

Among other items of interest are the following:
Lace trimmed and scalloped scarfs and table covers 25c, 50c.
Handsome 18-inch linen centerpieces trimmed in real Cluny lace 98c.
Mercerized table damask in pretty patterns that look like linen. Width 60 to 72 inches, 35c to 75c yard. Mercerized napkins 98c to $1.14 dozen. The damask wears wonderfully well and looks like linen.
Pure linen huck towels in many sizes and patterns. Very special values at 25c, 29c.

Crumpled Undermuslins Priced To Go

If fresh these gowns would be $3 now they are only $2. The $2 gowns are only $1. Drawer-and-Corset Cover Combinations reduced from $2 to $1. From $1.25 to 75c.

Bargains in Coats

Not only bargains but beauties as well because of the exquisite quality and swinging grace of the lines. Silk seal-plush. The skirts have just the right sweep and the upper part of the coat is also so carefully tailored, the neck and shoulders fit with absolute perfection. $12.12, $15 and $16.12 for coats worth double.

Tobacco Cottons

Six months ago we placed our order for tobacco cotton. Today the mill would have been very glad to pay us a nice profit and not ship same. However you will find same now on sale at our store. We can not promise the low prices that we are selling same to last very long. When our original purchase is exhausted our prices will have to advance in accordance with today's market.

The tobacco cottons we sell are exceptionally good, having a fine selvage. No other store in Maysville can buy our brands, which are confined to us.

When you compare prices, compare quality and you will come back here to buy.

THE DECLINE OF VOLUNTEER WORK.

A woman prominent in philanthropies in another city was speaking the other day of the difficulty of getting volunteer workers. Years ago, there seemed to be a lot of young women who could be secured to visit the sick and read to them, teach in mission Sunday schools, etc. Today she finds it almost impossible to get such workers.

Probably the type of women who used to do this work are now engaged in professional employment. Formerly these girls remained in their homes, helped about the housework and had much leisure time. They were available for all sorts of philanthropies. Now they need all their free time for rest and recreation.

Thus the world gets on a more commercialized basis. The unmarried girl who used to be visiting the sick is now pounding a typewriter.

But the family that has one or more girls having a regular income should be in easier financial circumstances. The girl having become self supporting, the man of the family is relieved from one drain on his income. Some of this will be absorbed by the modern cost of living, but not all.

The man who is relieved from the support of his daughters should remember that years ago the women used to carry on without pay many charities and philanthropies. Now much of this work has to be paid for. The work of women has added new wealth to the community, some which should be returned to the philanthropies which women used to support so generously. Also a peculiar responsibility rests on people of both sexes who have ample support without taking any business or professional position. The number of volunteer workers is too few today, and charity is a field offering many satisfactions to men and women of wealth.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING.

Comparatively few business men realize how they might profit by making use of classified newspaper advertising. These little columns are read perhaps more thoroughly than anything else in the paper. Every one is interested to know what other people are offering for sale, what people want help and what people are looking for situations.

Classified advertising is a genuine department of news events, reflecting the daily life of the people, their desires to sell and buy.

Classified advertising is the means by which the farmer in the outside districts reaches consumers in the town who will pay better prices than he can get at the stores. It is the means by which the merchant can reach the outlying country. It is the efficient promoter of all kinds of business relations, at the cost of a few small coins.

The country correspondent who about this time sends in the regular item reading, "The sick are all gaining," might as well abandon cherished hopes of any very distinguished career in the field of journalism.

The movement against fraudulent advertising causes lots of commotion in some quarters, but there isn't the slightest flurry among retail merchant that do business close to the people whom they supply.

It is claimed that sensational and vicious moving pictures are the most popular. Also children like candy much better than bread but they aren't usually permitted to live on candy.

No one has been seen reading Washington's Farewell Address in preparation for Washington's Birthday, but a large number of people are cutting out hatelets from cherry colored paper.

The warring powers are glad to have the United States feed the war sufferers, as it increases just so much the amount the aforesaid sufferers can pay in taxes.

Our people still continue to fight Boss rule, in spite of the efficiency that some foreign nations are showing under this system.

Judging from Mr. Wilson's St. Louis speech, he not merely wants a Big Stick, but the whole tree.

It is not claimed that the members of Henry Ford's peace party are too proud to fight.

Saved Girl's Life

"I want to tell you what wonderful benefit I have received from the use of Thedford's Black-Draught," writes Mrs. Sylvia Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky.

"It certainly has no equal for la grippe, bad colds, liver and stomach troubles. I firmly believe Black-Draught saved my little girl's life. When she had the measles, they went in on her, but one good dose of Thedford's Black-Draught made them break out, and she has had no more trouble. I shall never be without in my home." For constipation, indigestion, headache, dizziness, malaria, chills and fever, biliousness, and all similar ailments, Thedford's Black-Draught has proved itself a safe, reliable, gentle and valuable remedy.

If you suffer from any of these complaints, try Black-Draught. It is a medicine of known merit. Seventy-five years of splendid success proves its value. Good for young and old. For sale everywhere. Price 25 cents.

Didn't Get Back in His Hole.

(Georgetown News.)

Colonel John Hendricks brought to the News office Thursday a big, fat groundhog, which he "bagged" Wednesday in a steel trap on the Harkness farm near White Sulphur. Col. Couple Go Through Ceremony Second Time When Husband Repents of His Lark.

Lamar, Mo.—An unusual marriage ceremony took place here a few days ago when Mr. and Mrs. Roy McCurdy were married for the second time, though they never had been divorced.

Four years ago McCurdy came to this section and, for a lark, he says, assumed the name of Roy Roach. Under that name he courted and wedded Rosa Rector, a Lamar girl. A short time ago he admitted that his right name was McCurdy. The young woman's parents insisted that the marriage ceremony be pronounced again and that the right name be used.

Farmers Pool Hemp.

(Jessamine Journal.)

Jessamine county's 275 acres of hemp, which made 300,000 pounds and sold at $11 a hundred, was pooled by C. T. Ashley & Co. for the growers of the county. The firm has purchased 800 bushels of hemp seed for $7,400. The hemp acreage for Jessamine county this year will be larger than for several years. The scarcity and present high prices for hemp seed will, without doubt, prevent numerous farmers from growing the lint. Many farmers complained turning from tobacco to hemp, which is easier raised and leaves the land in better condition.

Record Hard To Beat.

(Oldham Era.)

Dr. W. H. Cox, of this city, has five White Rock hens which have made a record that is hard to beat. From December 18 to February 7, inclusive, he has received 201 eggs. During the month of January he received 122 eggs, which is more than an average of twenty-four eggs to the hen, and fell short by only five of coming up to the record of Mr. W. J. Jenkins, of Glendale, which won the silver loving cup at the recent poultry contest. Dr. Cox is justly proud of his small flock and believes that his success is greatly due to the careful and systematic attention he gives them.

WORK OF MAINTAINING ROADS

People in Many States Spending Much Money for Improvement, but Overlook Needed Care.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of maintenance in connection with the work of improving the roads. The people in nearly all the states are filled with enthusiasm for road improvement and are spending enormous sums of money in the construction of superb roads; and yet almost without exception they are making little provision to care for the roads after they are built. This is true not only in the various counties, but under many of our state highway departments.

To maintain the roads in good condition year after year requires a considerable annual outlay, but this outlay is infinitely less than the loss which must fall upon the people eventually if they allow their roads to go to utter ruin. The thing for all advocates of good roads to do is to urge continuous, systematic maintenance and the setting aside every year of an amount per mile estimated by the engineer in charge to be sufficient for the proper maintenance of the road—a course which must make for economy and efficiency.

Get Roads in Shape.

Use the drag to get roads into the best possible shape for winter. They may be bad enough at best, but proper work will help greatly.

Profit in Road Dragging.

Good roads save money because: They cheapen transportation to the markets.

They reduce the drain upon capital invested in horses.

They prevent waste of time, and "time is money."

They add to the joy of living, and joy adds to the effectiveness of life.

Good roads may be had by dragging.

Great Road Improver.

The King drag is the great road improver.

Fifty women take an active part in the municipal governments of Swedish cities. Seven of them are busy in Stockholm.

The seat of a new bathtub chair will remain level, no matter what position the device is attached inside or outside of the tub.

PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

FEDERAL AID FOR HIGHWAYS

Public Sentiment is Strong for Law to Authorize Government Help in Road Improvement.

Public sentiment throughout the United States is overwhelmingly in favor of federal aid in highway improvement, as shown in the report recently made to congress by the joint committee on federal aid. It is no longer a question of the desirability of a national law providing for such governmental help in creating a national system of good roads, nor of the constitutionality of such an act, but of deciding upon a measure the provisions of which shall be framed so carefully that when enacted into law it will be so equitable and effective that it will remain practically unchanged for many years and be a credit to the congress that enacts it.

In its report the committee gives many reasons for recommending national participation in the good roads movement and clearly indicates that no doubt exists in the minds of the members that a federal aid law soon will be passed, although members did not agree upon any particular plan or bill to be presented to congress.

Federal aid is justified not only because past methods, including state participation in road building, have proved inadequate, but because the activity of the government would emphasize the importance of better roads, establish higher standards, and to some extent shift the burden of expense from the rural resident to the city dweller.

Although under federal aid city residents would contribute two-thirds of the money to be expended, and all would be spent on rural roads outside of incorporated cities and villages, no opposition has been heard to it on the ground that it would place an unjust burden on the city resident, who, while only indirectly benefited, appreciates the value of good roads to the community and the benefits that all will enjoy.

A blush in a man may be a weakness; in a woman, a resolve to do right.

RECORD OF THE PAST

So Stronger Evidence Can Be Had in Maysville

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from kidney ills, should find comforting words in the following statement.

Mrs. John Burns, Maysville, says: "I was subject to severe spells of backache and kidney trouble. They came on every three or six months and at times I was confined to bed and almost helpless. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they gave me quick benefit. Since then when I have noticed slight return attacks of backache, I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and they have never failed to quickly check the trouble."

OVER SEVEN YEARS LATER Mrs. Burns said: "The statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills still holds good. I know that this medicine acts as represented."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Burns has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Theory Put Into Practice by Well Known Business Man

J. C. BRADY

A druggist has many opportunities to make lasting friends of his customers," said Mr. J. C. Brady, popular Rexall Pharmacist of Fall River, Mass. "The very nature of his business draws their confidence for little helpful suggestions on the matter of health. Many people have thanked me for recommending Rexall Orderlies as the best relief for constipation and its resultant ills. Put up in dainty candy tablet form, they are pleasant to the taste and make an ideal laxative for the home—for men, women and children alike."

"TO THE VILE DUST."

Lulled by the faint perpetual murmur of leaf and branch, without a sound from bird or beast to break its soothing monotone, the two men lay down within a few yards, though out of sight of each other. And for a time all was very still.

Then Vanhelmet rose slowly, without a sound, and came on tiptoe to the other tent, his right hand in the pocket where the bandanna handkerchief had been. He was no longer. He came close up to the sunny side of the tent and listened vainly for a sound. But Stingaree lay like a log in the shade on the far side, his face to the canvas and his straw sombrero tilted over it. And so Vanhelmet found him, breathing with the placid regularity of a sleeping child.

Vanhelmet looked about him; only the ring of impenetrable trees and the deep blue eye of heaven would see what really happened. But as to what exactly was to happen Vanhelmet himself was not clear as he drew the revolver ready cocked; even he shrank from shooting a sleeping man. What he desired and yet feared was a sudden start, a semblance of resistance, a swift, justifiable shot. And as his mind's eye measured the dead man at his feet the life man turned slowly over on his back.

It was too much for Vanhelmet's nerves. The revolver went off in his hands. But it was only a cap that snapped, and another and another, as he stepped back, firing desperately. Stingaree sat upright, looking his treacherous enemy in the eye. And when the sixth cap snapped as harmlessly as the other five Vanhelmet caught the revolver by its barrel to throw or to strike. But the raised arm was seized from behind by Howie, who had crept from the scrub at the snapping of the first cap; at the same moment Stingaree sprang upon him, and in less than a minute Vanhelmet lay powerless, grinding his teeth, foaming and bleeding at the mouth.

The bushrangers' action was silent, swift, concerted, prearranged. They lashed their prisoner's wrists together, fished his elbows to his ribs, hobbled his ankles and tethered him to a tree by the longest and the stoutest of their many ropes. The tree was the one under which Vanhelmet had found himself the day before.

"When we came upon you yesterday morning in the storm one of us was for leaving you to die in your tracks," began Stingaree. He was immediately interrupted by his mate.

"That was me!" cried Howie, with a savage satisfaction.

"It doesn't matter which of us it was," continued Stingaree, "the other talked him over. We put you on one of our horses, and we brought you more dead than alive to the place which no other man has seen since we took a fancy to it. We saved your miserable life. I won't say at the risk of our own, but at risk enough even if you had not recognized us. We were going to see you through, whether you knew us or not; before this we should have set you on the road from which you had strayed. I thought you must know us by sight, but when you denied it I saw no reason to disbelieve you. It only dawned on me by degrees that you were lying, though Howie here was sure of it."

"I still couldn't make out your game—if it was funk I could have understood it—so I tried to get you to own up in the night. I let you see that we didn't mind whether you knew us or not, and yet you persisted in your lie. So then I smelled something deeper. But we had gone out of our way to save your life. It never struck me that you might go out of your way to take ours."

"I never meant taking your lives," muttered Vanhelmet. "I meant taking you, as you deserved."

"We scarcely deserved it of you. But that is a matter of opinion. As for taking us alive, no doubt you would have preferred to do so if it had seemed equally safe and easy. You had not the pluck to run a single risk. You were given every chance. I sent Howie into the scrub, took the powder out of six cartridges and put what anybody would have taken for a loaded revolver all but into your hand. I sat at your mercy, quite looking forward to the sensation of being stuck up for a change. If you had stuck me up like a man," said Stingaree, "you might have tried to tell the tale."

"You tried to shoot me in my sleep," said Stingaree, speaking slowly, with intense articulation. "That's your gratitude. You will live just long enough to wish that you had shot yourself instead."

Stingaree rose.

"You may as well shoot me now," cried Vanhelmet, with a husky effort.

"Shoot you? I'm not going to shoot you at all, shooting's too good for you. But you are to die—make no mistake about that. And soon, but not tonight. That would not be fair to you, for reasons which I leave to your imagination. You will lie where you are to night, and you will be watched and fed like your superiors in the condemned cell. The only difference is that I can't tell you when it will be. It might be tomorrow—I don't think it will—but you may number your days on the fingers of both hands."

So saying, Stingaree turned on his heel and was lost to sight in the shades of evening before he reached his tent. But Howie remained on duty with the condemned man.

As such Vanhelmet was treated from the first hour of his captivity. Not a rough word was said to him. A blanket was permitted him day and night, but night and day he was sedulously watched, and neither knife nor fork was provided with his meals. His fare was relatively not inferior to that of the legally condemned, whose notorious privileges and restrictions served the bushrangers for a model.

And Vanhelmet clung to the hope of a reprieve with all the sanguine tenacity of his ill-starred class, though it did seem with more encouragement on the whole. For the days went on, and each of many mornings brought its own respite till the next. The welcome an

And Vanhelmet clung to the hope of a reprieve with all the sanguine tenacity of his ill-starred class, though it did seem with more encouragement on the whole. For the days went on, and each of many mornings brought its own respite till the next. The welcome an nouncement was invariably made by Howie after a colloquy with his chief, which Vanhelmet had watched with breathless interest for the first day or two, but thereafter with increasing coolness. They were trying to frighten him; they did not mean it, any more than Stingaree had meant to shoot the new chum who had the temerity to put a pistol to his head after the affair of the Glenruald bank. The case of lucky Fergus, justly celebrated throughout the colony, was a great comfort to Vanhelmet's mind; he could see but little difference between the two; but if his treachery was the greater so also was the ordeal to which he was being subjected.

There was an interval of the faint, persistent rustling of branch and leaf, varied by the screech of a distant cockatoo and the nearer cry of a crow, as the dusk deepened into night, as expeditiously as on the stage. Vanhelmet was not awed by the quiet voice to which he had been listening. It lacked the note of violence which he understood; it even lulled him into a belief that he would still live to tell the tale. But in the dying light he looked up, and in the fierce, unrelenting face, made the more sinister by its foppish furniture, he read his doom.

"Are you going to shoot me before you go," he cried, "or are you going to leave me to die alone?"

"Neither here," said Stingaree. "We're too fond of the camp."

It was his first brutal speech, but the brutality was too subtle for Vanhelmet. He was beginning to feel that something dreadful might happen to him after all. The pinions were removed from his arms and legs, the long rope detached from the tree and made fast to one of Stingaree's stirrups instead. And by it Vanhelmet was led a good mile through the scrub, with Howie at his heels.

A red sun had risen on the camp, but in the scrub it ceased to shine, and the first open space was as sunless as the dense bush. Spires of sand kept whirling from earth to sky, joining other spinning spires, forming a monster balloon of yellow sand, a balloon that swelled until it burst, obscuring first the firmament and then the earth. But the mind of Vanhelmet was so busy with the fate he feared that he did not realize he was in another duststorm until Stingaree at the end of the rope was swallowed like a tug in a fog. And even then Vanhelmet's peculiar terror of a duststorm did not link itself to the fear of sudden death which had at last been put into him. But the moment of mental enlightenment was at hand.

The rope trailed on the ground as Stingaree loomed large and yellow through the storm. He had dropped his end. Vanhelmet glanced over his shoulder, and Howie loomed large and yellow behind him.

"You will now perceive the reason for so many days' delay," said Stingaree. "I have been waiting for such a dust storm as the one from which we saved you, to be rewarded as you endeavored to reward me. The chances are perhaps against you and somewhat in favor of a more unpleasant death, but it is quite possible that the storm may pass before it finds you and that you may then hit the fence before you die of thirst, and at the worst we leave you no worse off than we found you. And that, I hold, is more than you had any right to expect. So long!"

The thickening storm had swallowed man and horse once more. Vanhelmet looked round. The second man and the second horse had also vanished. And his own tracks were being obliterated as fast as footmarks in blinding snow.

(The End.)

This episode will be shown at the Washington Theater. The next "Stingaree" story will start in The Ledger next Monday.

BUTTER-MAKING HINTS

Never Mix Warm Cream With the Cooled Article.

If Desirable to Use Artificial Coloring It Should Be Added to Cream Before Churning—Put Up in Neat Packages.

Cool the cream from the separator as soon as possible to 55 degrees F. or lower.

Never mix warm cream with cool cream.

Mix all the cream to be churned in one vat or can at least 18 hours before churning.

Ripen at a temperature of 70 to 75 degrees F. for from six to eight hours.

The temperature of churning should be such as to make the butter come in from 35 to 40 minutes, usually 55 to 60 degrees F.

If it is desired to use artificial coloring, it should be added to the cream just before churning.

Stop churning when the granules are about the size of peas, varying to wheat, and draw off the buttermilk.

Wash the butter once with pure water at the churning temperature, agitating three or four times, and drain.

Wash a second time with water about four degrees above churning temperature, and drain.

Add the salt wet while the butter is in granular form, using about one to one and one-half ounces for each pound of butter, according to the demands of the market.

Work the butter just enough to distribute the salt evenly.

If the butter is to go on the market it should be put up in neat, attractive packages.

BEST TOP LAYER OF SILAGE

Heavy Green Stalks From Which Ears Have Been Removed Form Heavy Cover—Packs Well.

For the top layer of the silo a good practice is to use heavy green stalks from which the ears have been removed. This forms a heavy layer that packs well and at the same time contains a smaller amount of food materials so that the minimum loss is sustained if it spoils.

Various methods and materials have been used for covering the top of the silage to prevent its spoiling. None have given complete satisfaction, but the one mentioned above has given as good results as any, especially when the top layer was thoroughly wet down and packed firmly by tramping.

The best practice is to commence feeding as soon as the silo is filled, in which case there will be no loss of silage through decay.
